Aesop's Fable, The Fox & the Crow

One bright morning as the Fox was following his sharp nose through the wood in search of a bite to eat, he saw a Crow on the limb of a tree overhead. This was by no Adjective Ends in EST the first Crow the Fox had ever seen. What caught his attentionAdjective Ends in EST time and made him stop for a second look, was that the lucky Crow held a of cheese in her beak.
"No need to search any farther," thought sly Master Fox. " is a dainty bite for my breakfast."
Up he trotted to the foot of the tree in which the Crow sitting, and looking up admiringly, he cried, ", beautiful creature!"
The Crow, her head on one side, watched the Fox suspiciously. But she kept her beak tightly closed on the cheese and did not return his greeting.
"What a charming creature is!" said the Fox. "How her feathers shine! What a beautiful form and what splendid wings! Such a wonderful Bird should have a very lovely voice, since everything else about her is so perfect. Could she sing just one song, I know I should hail her Queen of Birds." Listening to these flattering words, the Crow all her suspicion, and also her breakfast. She

"Thank you," said Master Fox sweetly, as he walked off. "Though it is cracked, you have a voice sure enough.

But where are your wits?"
