Soon after her father's remarriage, _____ girl name one found that all the housework fell to her while _____ girl name two idled her days away. _____ girl name one father was a timid man, and could not bring himself to defy his wife. So _____ girl name one wore _____ girl name two cast off clothes, and her hands grew red and chapped from scrubbing in the cold, while _____ girl name two attended parties, growing _____ bad trait _____ and _____ bad trait.

One year, when the winter snows were particularly fierce, _____ girl name one family ran out of money.

_____ girl name one stepmother began nagging her father to send _____ girl name one away, because they could not afford to keep two girls. Reluctantly, _____ girl name one father agreed. He took _____ girl name one to a cottage deep in the woods and left her there.

_____ girl name one was very frightened. The woods were said to be filled with _____ scary thing and _____ scary thing. But _____ girl name one was also practical. She entered the cottage with her small bundle and found a fireplace, a lopsided table and a rusty old pot. _____ girl name two put away the loaf of _____ food, the knife and the slab of _____ food her father had given her. She folded the blanket and laid it near the fireplace. Then she collected wood and built a fire.

_____ girl name one knew the _____ food and _____ food would not last her all winter. So she made a snare using the thin, flexible branches of the trees and caught a snow rabbit to eat. She also dug under the deep snow, and found some roots and _____ food for food.

By dark, _____ girl name one had melted water for drinking, and used the rest to make a _____ food. So _____ girl name one ate well. Then she lay down near the fire for the night, listening to the wind howl and pretending to herself that she was not frightened of the woods.

It was midnight when the knock came

Knock, knock, knock.

It echoed hollowly through the dark cottage. _____ girl name one woke with a start, her heart pounding in fear. It came again.

Knock, knock, knock.

_____ girl name one thought of the _____ scary thing. She hid under her blanket, praying the thing would go away.

Knock, knock, knock.

Oksana rose, grabbing a branch. She crept towards the door. The wind howled eerily down the chimney.

_____ girl name one _____ swallowed and swung the door open. There was nothing there. Her heart pounded fiercely as she stared out at the snow whipping about in the light of her small fire. Then she looked down. _____ girl name one _____ let out a shriek of terror and leapt back, dropping her stick. It was a _____ head body part _____. An evil _____ scary thing _____.

It had no body!

"Who are you?" _____ girl name one _____ stuttered, clutching the door with shaking hands.

"I am _____ animal one _____ Head," it replied.

Indeed, _____ girl name one _____ saw at once that it was. The head was _____ color _____, with curved _____ head body _____ part _____ and strange, haunted _____ head body part _____.

"I am cold and hungry. May I sleep by your fire?" the _____ animal one _____ Head asked. Its voice was cold and lifeless.

_____ girl name one _____ gulped down her horror.

"Of course," she said.

"Lift me over the threshold," demanded the _____ animal one _____ Head hollowly. _____ girl name one _____ did as she was bidden.

"Place me near the fire."

Anger warred with compassion inside her, but compassion won. _____ girl name one _____ put it next to the fire.

"I am hungry," said the _____ animal one _____ Head. "Feed me."

_____ girl name one _____ thought of her meager food supply. The _____ food _____ left in the pot was for her breakfast.

She fed it to _____ animal one _____ Head.

"I will sleep now," it said. There was no softening in its attitude toward her. Nonetheless, _____ girl name one _____ made it comfortable for the night, giving it her blanket and sleeping in a cold corner with only her cloak to keep her warm.

When she woke in the morning, _____ animal one _____ Head was gone. Where it had slept was a large trunk, filled with the most beautiful _____ clothing _____ she had ever seen. Under the gowns lay heaps of gold and jewels.

_____ girl name one _____ stared blankly at the riches in front of her. Her father's voice roused her.

"Daughter, I am come."

_____ girl name one _____ forgot the trunk in her joy. She ran into his arms. He had defied her stepmother to come and bring her back to their home.

"Papa, come see!" _____ girl name one _____ exclaimed as she pulled him into the cottage. Her words tumbled over each other as she explained.

Her father took her home. She was honored in her town for her compassion and her bravery, and won scores of suitors. She married soon after her return from the cottage.

Hearing _____ girl name one _____ story, and seeing the riches she had received, _____ girl name two _____ went to the cottage in the forest and spent the night there. But when _____ animal one _____ Head appeared, she was too lazy to serve it. In the morning, all her gowns had turned to _____ embarrassing clothing _____ and her possessions to _____ boring noun _____.

But _____ girl name one _____ lived to a ripe old age in happiness and prosperity.
