The Epidemic - Chapter 1, Part 1

I should have _____ Verb Past Tense them.

But by the time _____ Noun Plural broke loose, it was already too _____ Adjective.

It was a _____ Adjective _____ Day of The Week, when I was out reading the latest issue of _____ Name of _____ Magazine or Newspaper besides my friend _____ Friends name on one of the few _____ Noun Plural available in the _____ Adjective Park. My _____ Adjective companion _____ Adjective - a _____ Animal - was also with us and was savoring the day just as much as me and _____ Same Friends name were.

"Can you believe what this article is saying about _____ Celebrity? I can't believe they would pen _____ her _____ or him a _____ demeaning noun for no good reason!" I voiced my opinion out loud. _____ Same Friends name stopped _____ Activity such as rollerblading or Playing video games to look over at me.

"What do you mean by that?" He/She wondered while trying to look at my magazine. I laid down the magazine on their _____ Part of Body so they could see better. I pointed at the _____ Adjective article.

"This is the _____ number ending in th such as ninth story written on _____ Same celebrity about how _____ Adjective he's became and even says he's doing _____ Adjective _____ activities such as _____ Crime _____!" _____ Same Friends name _____ shook their head at me.

"Why do you even read _____ Same Name of Magazine or Newspaper _____ anyway? The team behind it stopped being _____ Adjective _____ a long time ago."

I shrugged. "There's occasionally a _____ Adjective _____ story in it."

"But is there enough _____ Same Adjective _____ stories to outweigh the _____ Adjective _____ ones?" _____ Same Friends name _____ posed an _____ Adjective _____ question, which I thought about for a good while. I was about to reply when I suddenly felt a raindrop. One had fallen onto the magazine as well.

Me and _____ Same Friends name _____ both looked up at the sky to find it had started raining in the distance and the rain clouds were _____ Adverb _____ moving towards us. It was a shame that neither of us had brought _____ Noun Plural _____ to shield the rainfall. Sure, it was _____ Weather State _____ earlier but I thought nothing of it. I glanced at my magazine.

"I guess good can come from _____ Same Name of Magazine or Newspaper _____ after all!" I exclaimed as I opened up the magazine and positioned it over my head. _____ Same Friends name _____ laughed at my joke as he/she got under with me

"Come on, _____." I crouched down to _____ my _____ as _____ kept the magazine over me while I did it. My _____ let out a yawn before standing up, albeit _____.

We all took off running out of the park and down several blocks until my issue of _____ _____ became so soaked that several pages began to tear apart from it. It was a good thing that the apartment complex me and my friend lived in was near the _____ so we were almost home.

I stopped under a convenience store's roof to catch my _____ and _____ stopped with me as he/she held onto _____ leash. Aside from the usual town ambiance and the rain, there were very few _____ out which I found surprising as _____ was usually _____ and the _____ was usually _____ no matter what the weather conditions were.

A poster suddenly blew at my feet and I crouched down to pick it up. It was a piece of notebook paper that had been hastily torn out and written on it were the words "THE END IS NEAR" in _____. I showed it to _____ and they _____ looked at it and shook their _____.

"I bet that _____ Noun _____ doesn't mean anything. A _____ Adjective _____ Noun _____ could have written it." They pointed out.

"True, true." I answered as I neatly folded up the paper and put it into the pocket of my _____ Kind of pants _____. "But have you noticed things around the city have been off lately?"

We picked up pace again and continued towards the apartment complex, making sure to avoid the rainfall by ducking under roofs of stores.

"Like what?" _____ Same Friends name _____ wondered.

"Well, for starters, there hasn't been much _____ Noun Plural _____ on these streets lately. They're usually busy no matter how heavy the rain is falling." _____ Same Friends name _____ looked up at the _____ Noun _____ in thought.

"That is true..." They looked back at me. "What else?"

"Well..." I took a moment to think, what other _____ Noun Plural _____ fell upon this city? "There hasn't been a lot of _____ Noun Plural _____ outside or in public."

"Yeah, but that could be because it's _____ Sickness or Disease _____ season and nobody wants to get _____ Adjective _____."

"But not to this extent, _____ Same Friends name _____! We live in an area with thousands of _____ Noun Plural _____! You would think in a city with so many that there would be still be plenty of _____ Noun Plural _____ out and about.."

"My question is how you didn't notice these things until now." _____ Same Friends name _____ snarked, as I _____ Verb Past Tense _____ my _____ part of body plural _____. It was true that I should have noticed these obvious signs but these days I was busy with my friend in our studies at _____ Proper Noun _____ University. I was planning to be a _____ Career _____ and _____ Same Friends name _____ was set on becoming _____ Country _____ S _____ Adjective Ends in EST _____ Career _____. With all the work we were putting into college, it really put a lot of strain on the two of us.

We were blocks from the apartments when up ahead besides a _____ Noun _____ was an _____ Adjective _____ man wearing _____ Adjective _____ clothes and holding up a sign in front of him. _____ Same Pet Name _____ began to growl upon noticing the stranger distanced a ways from us.

"Relax, _____ Gender of pet _____." I reached down and _____ Verb Past Tense _____ my _____ Same animal _____ in an effort to comfort it. "I'm sure he means no harm."

"I hope you're right about that..." _____ Same Friends name _____ commented worriedly.

We approached the man and his crumpled _____ Material such as tin foil sign illuminated by a nearby _____
Noun
read, " _____
Sentence or quote ". I had recognized this from _____ Where the quote or sentence was originally from which I took to thinking it had as much relevancy as the piece of paper I had found a while back.

The man looked at us with a _____ Adjective look in his _____ Plural part of body. "You both better leave the city as soon as you can!"

"Why?" I asked.

"Can't you see? The end of the world is near! Read the sign!" He _____ Verb Past Tense the sign he was Verb Present ends in ING towards us even though we had already taken it into account.

"We see it clear, sir." _____
Same Friends name nodded, not really wanting to pay attention to the man. "

Your name, can we go to the _____ place already? The _____ Noun Plural might get worse."

"Okay, we'll go." I assured my friend. "Thanks for the _____ Noun sir, we'll keep it in mind."

I lead my _____ Same animal past the _____ Adjective man as _____ Same Friends name followed after. He/She would gladly continue using the copy of _____ Same name of magazine or newspaper as a temporary substitute for an

Noun

but the pages were now completely _____ Adjective _____.

They frowned while looking down at the papers with the ink used to print them now starting to smear.

"Don't worry about it, _____ Same Friends name _____, the _____ Proper Noun _____ Apartments building is up ahead and a few drops won't hurt us, right?"

"Right!"

We started to run as to make it indoors before we became more soaked than we already were. Although we could still hear the _____ Adjective _____ words of the _____ Adjective _____ man shouting: "The end is near, I'm telling you! Get out while you still can!"

Within minutes the _____ Material _____ exteriors of _____ Same Proper Noun _____ Apartments was in view and a feeling of great _____ Emotion _____ washed over me and _____ Same Friends name _____. Wordlessly, we went inside...
