

Are You Crazy?

1. Adjective
2. Noun
3. Proper Noun Plural
4. Adjective Ends In Est
5. Noun Plural
6. Proper Noun
7. Verb Base Form
8. Verb Past Tense
9. Preposition
10. Verb Present Ends In Ing
11. Adverb
12. Verb Present Ends In S

Are You Crazy?

Hi. I am a Adjective psychiatrist. My name doesn't matter. Anyway, I'll be determining if you are crazy.

Firstly, I want you to think about your Noun. Did you have all the civil liberties you wanted, or were your Proper Noun Plural the Adjective Ends in EST and made you want to be diagnosed with an Oedipus complex? Secondly, what kinds of Noun Plural did you watch growing up? Were you allowed to watch Proper Noun cartoons or were you forced to watch tapes that your parents made themselves that were about things that you could Verb Base Form on regular television but the TV set itself was never on? If you answer that question with the latter, the shows that are included in the made-at-home-by your parents category include educational (or fun) cartoons, nature shows and/or other doseedentaries and or docuseries, or sporting events. Of course, they would be edited, but the quality of the editing isn't that important. Third question: was your family close? Do your family members talk to each other? Did anyone get Verb Past Tense or shunned? Are you fracking any Preposition your cousins? You don't have kids with any of them? That's inbreeding, you know. I don't even need you to answer these questions. I know that if you answered them with the answer that a normal person would give that you're not crazy. Even having to consider not Verb Present ends in ING the messed up answer is a tell-tale signal that you need help. Adverb, I can't help you. I don't think anyone can. Don't be the one who Verb Present ends in S drugs to pay for your therapy.