

Dining Wars

1. Noun
2. Noun

Dining Wars

Our dining _____ Noun used to be a war _____ Noun. I thought the battles about correct table pronoun would never end. It was us kids versus Mom, and it seemed like a fight that would last to the adjective end. But tonight Dad finally declared a/an adjective truce, and we negotiated a/an adjective peace noun. Mom promised to no longer get adverb upset and shoot us dirty pronoun and make adjective remarks when we do adjective things she doesn't like. We in turn agreed to:

1. Use napkins to wipe our body and not our pronoun.
2. Keep out pbody off the table.
3. Not use our pbody to pick up pronoun.
4. Never take with food in our pbody.

Dinner is now adjective in our house.