Chapter 9

When the lights $\qquad$ Fudge said, "Ohhh... $\qquad$ ."

I told him, "Be $\qquad$ . You can't $\qquad$ in the movies."
"Okay, Pee-tah," he said.

That's when he started $\qquad$ his popcorn. At first I didn't notice but I wondered why the people in front of us were turning around every second. Then I heard Fudge whisper, "Pow-pow-pow!" and I saw him throw a handful of $\qquad$ .

I $\qquad$ my father. "He's throwing his $\qquad$ ," I whispered.

My father $\qquad$ across me and $\qquad$ Fudge on the leg. "If you throw one more $\qquad$ I'm going to take it away from you."
"No $\qquad$ !" Fudge said very $\qquad$ .
"Shush. . . ." the $\qquad$ in front of us said. "Shush!" Fudge said back to them.
"You see," I told my father, "he's too $\qquad$ for the movies. He doesn't understand."

But from the moment the first $\qquad$ came on the $\qquad$ Fudge sat still and $\qquad$ $\qquad$ . And after a while I forgot all about him and concentrated on the $\qquad$ . It was much $\qquad$ than I thought it would be. It showed all these bear cubs and how they live.

I'm not sure when I realized Fudge was gone. I guess it was when I turned to ask him if he had any $\qquad$ left. I had already finished mine and was still $\qquad$ . I was really $\qquad$ to see he wasn't there. I mean, one minute he was sitting right next to me and the next minute he was gone.
"Hey, Dad," I $\qquad$ to my father. "He's gone."
