Figurative Language Story?

The song _____ song title makes me feel as _____ Adjective as a _____ Noun. Which is why I listened to it during class instead of paying attention to the lesson. It was kind of a crazy class. The classroom was a _____ Event. The teacher was out today. They say he was as sick as a _____ Animal. Our sub was Mr. Michaels. Mr. Michaels made us mop mucus mats in _____ Location. I thought we would hate that, but it was actually a lot more fun than our usual classwork, especially with the music. It was nice seeing all the soap bubbles _____ action a human can do across the floor as we cleaned. It was hard work, and by lunch time I was so hungry I could eat a _____ Animal! We got to the cafeteria and I took my seat. _____ Onomatopoeia! The sound caught the whole room's attention before I could even take a bite. _____ Onomatopoeia! and then _____ Onomatopoeia! The one making the racket was our sub Mr. Michaels. He strutted into the cafeteria like _____ famous person. "This ceiling isn't the best, but it's up there." he announced before taking his seat. I turned my attention back to my lunch. Today's meal was mystery soup. I took a spoonful. It made a _____ Adjective sound as I lifted the spoon from the bowl. It was boiling hot and the heat radiated of the spoon like a _____ Noun on fire in July. It smelled _____ Adjective and tasted _____ Adjective. Once I was finished everyone agreed that it looked pretty ugly, but tasted awfully good.
