Maybe You Will Remember

There are few things worse than the fear that you're going insane. One day, _____^{Person} and her mother stop at a hotel in _____^{Location}. Her mother is ill, so the girl calls the hotel _____^{profession} to see what can be done for her. The _____^{profession} says she needs _____^{Noun}, and it can be retrieved from his wife across town. When she returns to the hotel, no one seems to remember who she is. When she asks to see the room her mom is in, it's totally different than the one she recalls. It turns out that _____^{Person Possessive} mother had the _____^{illness} and died soon after her daughter left. In order to divert _____^{concept}, the _____^{profession} buried her _____^{Noun} in a cemetery, redecorated the room completely and told everyone in the hotel to pretend they didn't _____^{verb present tense modifying a noun} her. What resulted was a poor girl who thought she was losing her _____^{body part} and didn't know where her mother was.
