DEAR ABBY 5

DEAR ABBY: I am a wife and mother in my late _____<sup>age</sup>_____. I'm also a registered _____<sup>profession</sup>_____, beginning a master's degree program to advance my career. I consider myself to be an _____<sup>Adjective</sup>_____ person, and I did well in college.

My husband is also _____<sup>Adjective</sup>_____, and I'm proud of his _____<sup>Noun</sup>_____ in his career. However, he can be _____<sup>Adjective</sup>_____ at times, giving the impression that he is _____<sup>adjective ending in er</sup>_____ than everyone else around him -- including _____<sup>person</sup>_____.

Today, I overheard him talking to his boss, whom he told about the master's program I am starting in a few weeks. He then told his boss he would probably have to write some of my papers for _____<sup>person</sup>_____. I couldn't believe he said that. First of all, it's not true; I would never have anyone complete my work for me. Second, I found it insulting that he would say I need him to complete my _____<sup>Noun Plural</sup>_____. (We are in different fields. He is an _____<sup>profession</sup>_____.)

He didn't know I was home when he said it, but I walked into his office as soon as I heard. He looked _____<sup>Adjective</sup>_____ and apologized, but I just can't get over it. I feel so _____<sup>Adjective</sup>_____ and _____<sup>Adjective</sup>_____. Is this what he tells his co-workers about _____<sup>Noun</sup>_____? How do I move on? -- ACCOMPLISHED IN OHIO

DEAR

ACCOMPLISHED: Your _____<sup>Adjective</sup> husband's _____<sup>Noun</sup> may be threatened because you are becoming more academically _____<sup>Adjective</sup>. He may also have been trying to inflate his image in his boss's _____<sup>body part plural</sup> by casting you as "the little _____<sup>Noun</sup>" when you caught him red-handed. Regardless of what he may say to others, your _____<sup>Noun Plural</sup> speak for themselves. Don't you forget that. As for how to move on, it may depend upon your willingness to forgive him for his _____<sup>Noun Plural</sup>.

DEAR ABBY: My son " _____<sup>person</sup> " and his girlfriend, " _____<sup>person</sup> ," lived together for _____<sup>number</sup> years. We were all very close and did lots of family things together with my other son and his family. _____<sup>person</sup> broke up with _____<sup>person</sup> two years ago, although they continued talking for some time afterward. We all hoped they would make up. He was under a lot of _____<sup>Noun</sup> at the time and suffers from _____<sup>Noun</sup> and _____<sup>Noun</sup>. He was sorry a month after the breakup, but _____<sup>person</sup> did not want to get back together.

We have stayed in touch. She still skates with my daughter-in-law, and we met for _____<sup>event</sup> recently. _____<sup>person</sup> mentioned she met someone on an online dating site six months ago and it could get _____<sup>Adjective</sup>. This man knows she feels it's time for marriage and a family. He is _____<sup>number</sup> years older than she is, never married and has no kids. They are not living together. _____<sup>person</sup> has met his family.

Should I let my son know? I feel _____<sup>person</sup> needs to move on, and he really hasn't. I think he still hopes they will be together. -- PROTECTIVE MOM IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR MOM: _____person_____ told you she had met someone because she knew you would deliver the message to your _____Noun_____. If he has put his life on hold, hoping to reunite with her, he deserves to know it isn't in the cards -- so tell _____person_____
