Case 2

Situation: The evening pharmacist was behind in the verification queue for the shift, because other staff members were or attending a Code Blue response. The pharmacist has the reputation for verifying the highest numbers of orders during a shift; on a shift, the pharmacist verified over 400 individual orders, which is far beyond other pharmacists. This pharmacist has been counseled about a past history of medication errors; many of them were careless as their root cause was the bypass of accepted safeguards in the for order review and verification. During the shift report, the evening pharmacist reported to the pharmacist that they did not review laboratory values for most of the orders verified where this action was required. To quote the pharmacist during report, "I was too and wanted to get out on time - so I blew it off - no biggie." The following day, the director of received 2 complaints from who reported that drug levels were not optimal and should have been adjusted based on laboratory values but were not because of the evening pharmacists' negligence.
