JN.1.2

First Verb Past Tense as part of the BA.2.86 'Pirola' strain, Juno has now been classified as a subvariant by the World Health (WHO), and a variant of Adjective in its own right. Both strains are descendants of Omicron.
In their latest, WHO maintained that JN.1 poses low risk to health, especially in well-vaccinated such as the UK. However, the rapid Verb Base Form of the strain may indicate that it is more transmissible than Adjective variants.
While the WHO has Verb Past Tense JN.1 as a "variant of interest," the organization said it poses a Adjective additional public Noun risk.
"Considering the, yet limited evidence, the additional public health posed by JN
.1 is evaluated as low at the global," the organization Verb Past Tense on 19 December.
