conversation	s of educators a	nd fundraisers strate	egizing for the day ahead.
EdV Collea	gueand	EdV Colleague V	vere just about to make a ru	n to getFavoi	rite Billys order when there w	vas a knock at th	ne door. EdV Coll	went quickly to se	ee what it was - b	out when s/he opened the door, then	re was nobody t	here - only a solitar	y, unassuming package lyin	g on the floor. Th	ne package was wide and flat, with	no label and no	return address.
"What is it?"	askedEdV	Colleague , as	EdV Colleague brought th	ne package to the	Place in
"Maybe it's a	new pack of Po	omegranate"
"Maybe it's _	Noun Plural	for the CP conve	ening"
"We ordered	those	months ago	u

"Yes, but there was rain"
"Well maybe it's a/n Adjective Noun"
The office, once filled with the humdrum ofAdjective work, became a hub of intrigue and suspense as the team speculated on the mystery. There was only one thing left to do:
opened the package. Under 3 layers of bubble wrap and 3 layers of there was a AdjectiveNoun
Everyone stared at the package and rifled through the wrapping. At last, a breakthrough emerged. Hidden within the depths of the wrappings lay a map, its faded parchment marked with a single location:
office .
With bated breath and hearts pounding, the team ventured into the unknown, guided by the promise of discovery
As they stepped into the dimly lit space, they were greeted by a sight that defied comprehension.
Before them stood a figure cloaked in shadows, a silhouette against the dim glow of moonlight. With a flourish of to be the sender of the mysterious parcel, a long-lost Noun seeking Noun .

In a tale w	oven with	threads	of	Noun	_ and	Noun	, the mystery of the package was finally laid to rest. Yet, a	amidst the	triumph	of unrav	eling the	e enigma	, one trut	h remained clear: in the heart of every mystery lies the	Noun	of	Noun	, wai	ting to be	e discover	red.
