First Cookout

It all started when I tried to break up with my Significant other, girlfriend or boyfriend or partner. I took Pronoun to a Location, then Pronoun favorite restaurant where I would break the news.

The waiter had just set down the Food and I decided it was time. "First Name of a Person," I said. "I think we should--" Before I could continue, Pronoun let out a scream. I looked at Pronoun in a panic, asking what was wrong when I saw it, a giant engagement ring in Pronoun empty wine glass. "

Yes!" Pronoun screamed and threw Pronoun arms around me. The waiter had delivered a proposal to the wrong table but I didn't have the heart to tell Pronoun. Now we're at her family cookout.

As soon as we walk through the door Pronoun leaves and Pronoun dad comes up to me. "Are you serious about my only daughter?" I gulped. "Y-yes?" He Verb Present ends in S his knuckles. "Was that a question, boy?"

"No?" Her dad narrowed his eyes at me and left. I spent the rest of the time mingling with Pronoun family and had a surprisingly good time. Then I fell in love with Pronoun cousin. I took Pronoun engagement ring and gave it to her cousin and we're getting married this year!
