

I Want To Teach You Vessels

1. Noun
2. Noun
3. Proper Noun
4. Noun
5. Adjective
6. Noun
7. Noun
8. Noun

I Want To Teach You Vessels

Once upon a time in the land of Bastylvania there was a vampire named Count Spencula. The Count was standing on his balcony watching bats fly among the treetops while listening to ominous organ music when he took a moment to appreciate just how much he loved that warm, iron-rich, nutritious red liquid called _____^{Noun}_____. He did not have a clotting disorder, but if his love of blood was expressed in Latin root words, he would have _____^{Noun}_____.

Count Spencula summoned his butler, "Jeeves, I grow hungry. Fetch me some villagers!" Jeeves returned with a group of 3 villagers and The Count didn't need a stethoscope to hear the pounding of their _____^{Proper Noun}_____ sounds. He approached the first villager and took a chomp, but then felt clots in the blood where the texture should have been smooth. "Ugh, Jeeves, this villager has a _____^{Noun}_____! Send him away!" Count Spencula stepped to the second villager and took a bite. The blood tasted like it had a distinct lack of iron. "Oh no, Jeeves! This villager is _____^{Adjective}_____! The blood is not delicious at all! Quickly Jeeves, fetch me a palate cleanser!"

Jeeves returned with a bag of yellowish-colored liquid full of electrolytes, vitamins, glucose, and hormones. "Would milord care for some _____^{Noun}_____?" Count Spencula leaped with joy, "Marvelous, Jeeves!" He took a small sip, "Mmm, mmm, this is sublime. The thickness of it sip the flow sip the perfect texture. The _____^{Noun}_____ is immaculate!"

Jeeves

bowed slightly to The Count, "Perhaps milord would like to retire for the evening?" Count Spencula agreed, "Yes, yes, all this excitement may raise my blood pressure to a dangerous degree. I would like to avoid getting _____." Noun

"As you wish milord." said Jeeves while he shepherded the villagers out of the manor as The Count turned into a bat and flew off into the sunset.