The Man That Never Heard

There was once a _____<sup>Noun</sup> who could never hear anything, and he was a very _____<sup>Verb</sup> young man. He lived in a town that was close _____<sup>Preposition</sup> where the _____<sup>Adjective</sup> _____<sup>Adjective</sup> Harpies lived in their _____<sup>Location</sup>. When anyone got too close _____<sup>Preposition</sup> the cave, the Harpies would enchant their listeners with their beautiful singing that would lure them into their cave so they could eat them. So one day, while The Man That Never Heard was walking, he walked a bit too close to the cave, and the harpies started to sing, but, not being able to hear, the man just kept on walking. Later that day, someone asked him where he had walked, and his reply was "I was walking on the shoreline of Stella, when I saw a cave that was carved into the wall on the cliff, so I went closer to find out more, but it appeared to be just an ordinary cave, so _____<sup>Pronoun</sup> just kept on walking." When the man was done telling his story, the person who asked where he had gone said, "Young _____<sup>Noun</sup> if your hearing wasn't as bad as it is, you would have just been killed." When The _____<sup>Noun</sup> That Never _____<sup>Verb</sup> _____<sup>Verb</sup> why he would've died, the _____<sup>Noun</sup> simply said, "The Harpies, son, the Harpies." And The That Never _____<sup>Verb</sup> was left to wonder what the man was talking about.
