Driving while Texting

Car wrecks have already been _____^{Past tense verb} by the _____^{Adjective} increase in cell phone use that occurred in the 1990s. People who use cell phones while driving are more _____^{Adjective} than people who talk to a front side _____^{Noun}. Another problem with cell phones is a fairly new addiction: texting, no matter where one is. In the 2000s, plenty of people are texting while they are driving. This recent media trend has created as many or more traffic _____^{Plural noun} than _____^{Adjective} cell phones. Unlike _____^{Adjective} held cell phones, text users in general must take their _____^{Plural noun} off the road for seconds at a time or maybe just a _____^{Noun}. That split second decision is putting more and more people in danger of _____^{Noun} collisions every day.

Henceforth, I propose that the state of Oklahoma outlaw _____^{Adjective} cell phones and text _____^{Verb} _____^{ending in ing} while driving. It is a _____^{Adjective} risk for the one driving and others sharing the _____^{Plural noun}. The state of Oklahoma should have the right to instate this _____^{Noun} on the grounds that the _____^{Noun} of others is compromised for the short-term gain of a single _____^{Noun} of society.
